

4.607

Thinking About Architecture: In History and at Present

Instructor: Prof. Mark Jarzombek

TA: Ana María León

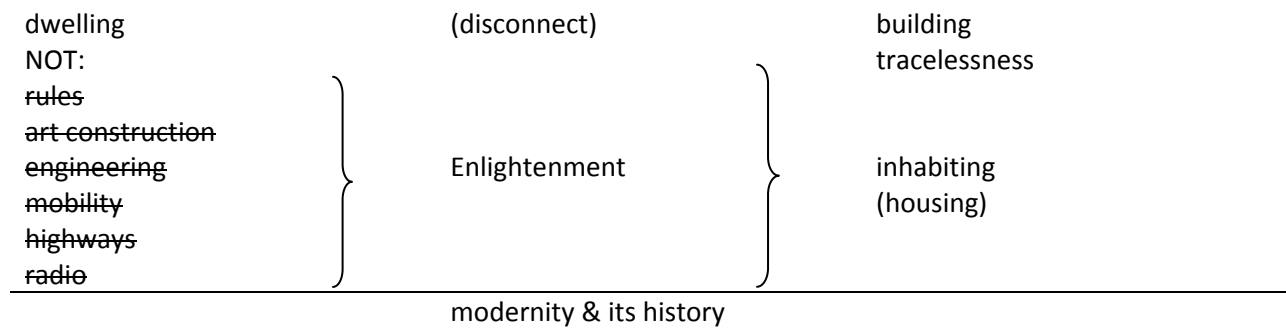

M: 9.30-12.30

LECTURE NOTES FROM November 23

General Theme: Phenomenology

Psychology and phenomenology emerged as 'modern' theoretical positions more or less at the same time. But whereas psychology entered architecture mainstream after WWII, (1950s-70s), phenomenology entered architectural mainstream only during the mid 1970s.

Heidegger

- tracing – very particular, like Vischer's schauen. increasingly ephemeral- reality coefficient is reduced
- dwelling predates building – thinking about inhabitation
- inhabiting vs. dwelling to be

Bauen (to build) → bhu / beo → bin

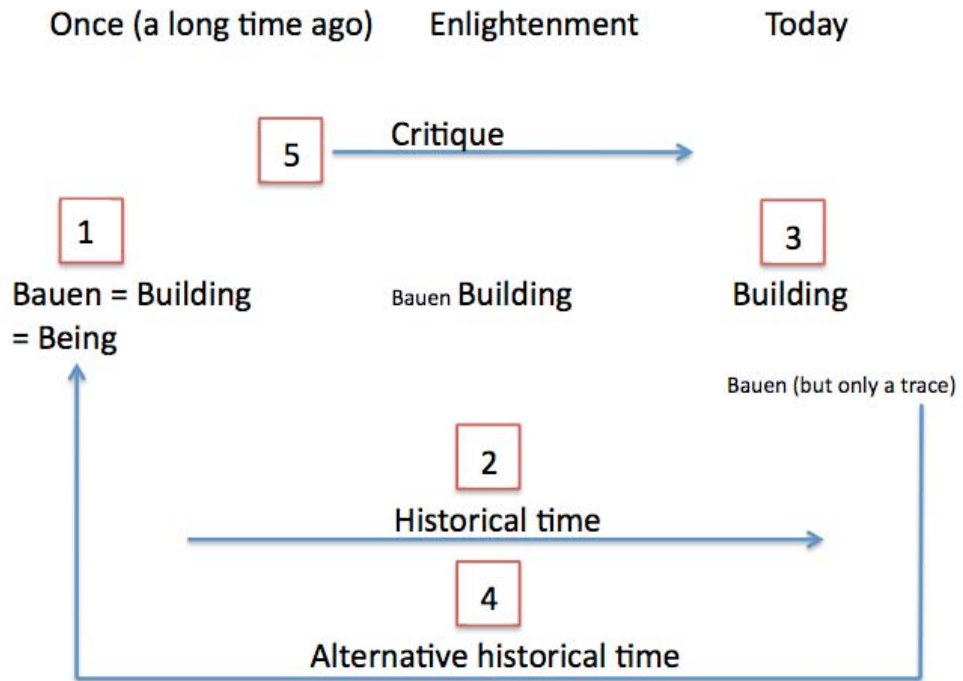

buan

Nachbar

neahgebur

bachgebauer → bauer = farmer old [European] aristocrats | culture, good habits owners & defenders of land

MIT OpenCourseWare
<http://ocw.mit.edu>

4.607 Thinking About Architecture: In History and at Present
Fall 2009

For information about citing these materials or our Terms of Use, visit: <http://ocw.mit.edu/terms>.