

Hi.

I'm John, and I'll be leading the recitation this week.

We'll be looking into how to use the text of emails in the inboxes of Enron executives to predict if those emails are relevant to an investigation into the company.

We'll be extracting word frequencies from the text of the documents, and then integrating those frequencies into predictive models.

Let's get started.